The work is drawing to a close—A Convenient and Ornamental Building.

There is now another new building completed upon the grounds of Colorado college. This is the Girls' hall, standing between Palmer hall and the president's house. It is a large, convenient and ornamental to every portion of the city. It will satisfy all demands to be made upon it and is a credit to those who have planned and earnestly to build it. The faces of this city under the eye of Mrs. W. P. Stocking are now nearly ready to turn the building over to the college, having raised the entire amount of money required to build it, and having completed it entirely by their own efforts.

The building faces east towards Cascade avenue. The walls are of Castles Rock lava stone, and the roof and gables are covered with shingles of Oregon cedar. In front of the building is a veranda of wood painted a carmine green, twenty-five feet in length and ten feet in width. On each side of this are triple windows of plain glass with segment transoms above them. Upon mounting brackets to the veranda the inscription "C. C." in small black letters in the stone to the right of the door catches the eye.

HALL

In Memoriam Virginius Auctoribus Carminibus hoc Aedificium Nomen Habet

The entrance hall is ten feet six inches in width, and, as throughout the entire building, has a floor of Georgia tile, and oil painting base and trimmings. To the right is the dining room, entered through sliding doors, and lighted and aired by a superb five window facing the avenue, and by one or two smaller windows on the north side. This room is thirty-one feet long and fourteen feet in width. Behind it is a small pantry with convenient cupboards, shelves, etc., and passing through this the kitchen is entered. This is rather a small room in the northwest corner of the building, and adjoining it are closets, refrigerator room, and an enclosed porch. To the left of the main entrance hall is the drawing room in the southeast corner. This, and also the parlor room behind it, have fireplaces tastefully set in tiles. In the southwest corner of the building is the mason's room with an alcove and bay window adjoining. On the west side of the building is also a small reception room, a bath room, while without is a poranca about seven y-five feet in length, backing the mountains, and a foreingood opportunity for a superb view of the range.

The ceiling extends under the entire building, and is reached by two ladders of stairs—one leading from without, and the other from one of the principal passageways of the main hallway. Here are found the laundry, scullery rooms, and the unfinished portions where the heating and ventilating apparatus is placed. Connections have been made with the steam heating plant, and the heat will be supplied to the building in a far more practical and more ways than that of most of the other buildings of the city. A large fan of the Sulzberger pattern is to exert motion by a water motor, and will force the heat from the central engine pipes to all rooms of the building, where it will enter from openings near the ceiling. Forcing the heat into the various rooms in this way will so create a steady current thus supplying abundant ventilation. During the hot weather the fan can be used to force cold air also through the rooms of the building.

The second and third floors are devoted exclusively to bedrooms. A narrow passage way runs north and south the entire length of each of these two stories.

The second story includes nine rooms besides a large bath room fitted with conveniences, while on the third floor there are ten rooms like those on the second floor.

The building will accommodate about thirty people and has cost upwards of $5,000. Electricity will be used in lighting.

The committee on furnishing is making great efforts to raise the amount needed for the furniture. Some of this money has already been raised, a majority more depends upon the generosity of cluical subscribers. A number of ladies of the city, however, have already pledged themselves to furnish certain rooms.

The last finishing touches upon the building, which now ornaments the college grounds, will be completed by the middle of this week, and the hall will be occupied, says Mrs. E. C. Palmer as manager, as soon as the money and donations for furnishing have been contributed and a satisfactory furniture procured.

Gossip and News Gathered Here and There Upon the Streets.

The Gazette did an injustice not long ago if attempting to do good. While trying to relieve the faculty of Colorado college of any responsibility in getting up a bill, the paper gave the impression that they had failed to extend en-of military training in conjunction with mental training, out the fact that Colorado College has a body of young men who voluntarily take up such exacting work for the interest in the institution. The college's are a great success and I am proud of them the past week when they marched so bravely along with the old veterans at Manitou. How those old fellows must have enjoyed seeing at them too and cheering of the glory of their youth when they marched forth as strong and bold, but not for pleasure, not on parade.

It is not long since the attention of Colorado Springs was drawn to Mrs. Julia Warc. Howe, and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Among the stories which were brought to light by the arrival of the famous authoress in this city is the following: Not long after Mrs. Howe had arisen in the still small hours of the night to write the poem which first brought her into prominence, the Union flag was waving triumphantly over Richmond and the blue coats were regaling themselves within the Confederate capital. General A. B. Terry, the hero of Fort Fisher, was then occupying the home of Jefferson Davis as his headquarters, his sisters being with him. Gazing out through the windows upon the road one day these ladies were surprised to see a mess a person. Then Mrs. Julia Warc. Howe making her way up the street with great precision and dignity. She drew near to the house and turning into the yard came up to the front door and rang. A servant came to the door and to whom she struck person she announced herself and her errand. She had come, she said, with the desire to see the former home of the great rebel, to sit at the piano of that sinful man, to sing her "Battle Hymn of the Republic" within its very walls. The servant departed upstairs to inquire if the visitor could have her desire fulfilled. She returned with the news that the Misses Terry were perfectly willing that Mrs. Howe should do as she wished, and thereupon the authoress seated herself at the piano, and avowed the echoes of the old house with her song. She was soon through with her task, and departed, fully satisfied.

It has always seemed to me that the people of Colorado Springs should be really above all others in the west to be the stranger within their gates by the name, for when we come and urge a return when we go again, "Especially this" has been done with men who at a few simple words could turn in this direction hundreds of persons of the most desirable class. A story came to me the other day that provoked me not a little. During the short stay of Mr. Jewell and Mr. Vandergrift in the city, as they were in the office of the hotel, and were being observed by two citizens. One of them in a jest bet the other $5 that he could address and address him familiarly. He took it and, waving up to the millionaire, grasped his hand and exclaimed, "Life or Vandergrift are you?" Mr. Vandergrift smiled and replied pleasantly, "The matter was afterwards explained to him and he seemed to think it so nothing of a joke on the citizen who had made the bet. But it is to be hoped that such a thing will never occur again in this city."

Persons many persons wonder what a "catastrophic" does on a news paper. The article given above looks in your way, it is, and is given verbatim as it came into the Gazette, one who at a past week. The manner in which the facts are strung together gives it a humorous flavor in spite of the terrible accident it related. "A special to The Times from Greenville, Ohio, says, about 8:30 this evening an arm of fire came, the destruction to the sale of Mrs. Greager, after half an hour the flames were extinguished a terrible explosion was heard, a over the city. Crows gathered and great excitement prevailed. Upon investigation a term to associate was present, where a fire engine and many people stood, a geyser of steam was present. Everything was confusion and the facts could not be learned for some time. When at last the truth came out that the engine had exploded in a fire storm and ignited from the engine. The force of the gas raised the engine eight feet in the air and then dropped into the yawning chasm. Cries of pain rent the air. The front of a grocery was blown in. Losses properly about $2500 insured. The wounded are Truman Southern, a lady injured internally, Eugene Boyer seriously bruised, Charles E. Fisher and Thomas O'Brien badly hurt by horse many others struck by flying debris. One boy is unaccounted for yet, and it is rumored that he is the bottom of the well under the engine. Work is going on to rescue the engine and ascertain if any one is under it. The origin of the fire was incendiary."
